BEFORE THE MEETING.

CINCINNATI, June 23, 10 a. m. Not twenty delegates are in Both galleries are two-thirds full. The weather is warm and sultry. It is understood the committee on credentials will report immediately after permanent organization is effected. The platform committee are still at work on their resolutions. The usual demonstrations of applause were made as prominent gentlemen came in, and when the banners of the Randall and other political clubs passed up the aisles. The fact is unmistakable however, that there is here much less of this sort of outside pressure for individual candidates than there was at Chicago. The woman's suffrage representatives were honored with applause from the audience as they took their seats. After a brilliant voluntary on the organ, the military bands played various national and operatic airs. Yankee Doodle alone seemed to rouse the audience

PROCEEDINGS IN THE CONVENTION.

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock when all the delegates appeared to be on hand. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Charles Taylor of the Scott Street Methodist church.

He implored blessing on the large assembly of representative men from all parts of the land; that its members might be imbued by lofty patriotism and strict conscientiousness; that they might have grace to act as under divine guidance and with respect to their responsibilities; that they might be granted good will, mutual forbearance, spirit of consolation, and regard for the views and opinions of each other; that all bitterness might be suppressed; that perfect good will might prevail and a spirit of self-sacrifice and of yielding personal preference to the greatest good of all concerned; that their deliberations might result in the highest good of the nation and that all concerned might be true to themselves, true to their fellow men, true to the principle by which they professed to be governed, true to their country and true to God.

On motion the reading of the minutes yesterday was dispensed with.

Mr. Stoutenburg, of Indiana, moved a resolution that the surviving soldiers of the Mexican war and widows and orphans should be held by congress on the same footing as the soldiers of 1812. It was referred to the platform committee.

The chairman announced the first business in order was the report of the committee on credentials He asked if it was ready to report. There was an interval of several minutes before there was any response. Meantime the chair ordered read a telegram from Reynolds, of New York, which said "A bonfire was ready to be lighted with checks for the democratic nominee." (Laughter and applause.)

At 10:54 Judge Hoadley announced that the chairman of the credential committee was not ready and called on the committee on permanent organization.

Mr. Martin, of Delaware, chairman of said committee, made a unanimous report of the following permanent organization:

For president ex-Gov. Stevenson, of Kentucky, and vice presidents and secretaries from each of the states.

When the report had been read Mr. Young, of Georgia, as a question of privilege, demanded to be permitted to present the report of the committee on credentials.

The chair said the report on permanent organization was before the house.

Mr. Martin moved that his report be adopted, and on that asked the previous question, which he subsequently withdrew.

Mr. Jeffreys of Louisiana moved to postpone further proceedings on permanent organization until the convention had received and acted on the committee on credentials. Adopted.

Mr. Young of Georgia, as chairman, presented the report of the committee on credentials, which was as follows:

There are two delegations present from the state of Massachusetts, one known as the Faneuil Hall delegation, and the other as the Mechanics Hall convention. By joint request made by the delegations to the committee on credentials, we unanimously recommend that both delegations be admitted to seats in the convention, the united delegation to count the vote to which the state is entitled. [Applause.]

In the case of the contesting delegation from the twenty sixth congressional district of Pennsylvania, we report that the sitting delegates are entitled to retain their seats as members of the convention

The committee has carefully examined all the evidence brought before it bearing on the contested case from the state of New York. It carefully and patiently considered the facts in the contest and weighed the evidence presented by both sides and by a singularly unanimous vote it allows the sitting members to retain seats. [General applause except from the Tammany bench.] With these exceptions there was no contest before the convention and we herewith submit the list of delegates duly entitled to seats in the convention.

Mr. Carroll, of Kansas, presented the minority report. It was proposed to have the reading clerk read it, but the chair said the gentleman from Kansas should have his own way about it. [Applause.]

Mr. Carroll proceeded to read his report, interrupted with boisterous cries of "Louder," "Louder," "Let the clerk read it"

Mr. Hoadley called the convention to order and said the gentleman from Kansas could be heard by the entire house if order was preserved and it was his right to be heard and he should be heard. [Applause.]

Mr. Carroll then read as follows:

After hearing the contesting delegation from the state of New York, we find that state is divided into two factions, each having all the material of a perfect party organization, and each assuming to represent regularly the large part of the democratic party of that state; that each of said party divisions has held a state convention under regular call and has duly elected delegates to represent the state of New York in this convention; that the attitude of these factions is precisely analogous to that of the democrats of that state in 1856; that to unite the party at that time the national convention decided the delegation of each should cast half the vote to which the state was entitled in that convention; that such action united the party in the state of New York and eventually in the election of a democratic president. We believe that a similar course at this time will result in a kindred success, and we therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Faulkner branch of the democratic delegates from the state of New York be allowed to cast 50 votes in this convention; that the Shakespeare Hall democracy be allowed to cast 20 votes in this convention, and that each of said divisions shall determine its method of counting such votes.

This report was signed by Messrs. Carroll of Kansas, Bell of New Jersey, Barlow of California, and Davidson of Arkansas.

Mr. Young demanded the previous question. He said the committee had spent all night on this work and he believed had done it well.

The previous question was seconded, ordered and the roll was called. When Alabama was called it was not ready and an interval was allowed for consultation.

Mr. Young inquired whether under the rules of the house of representatives there would not be an hour for debate after the previous question was ordered.

The chair replied that the convention had accepted the rule of the last convention when only five minutes debate was allowed. After the order of the previous question the roll was called which resulted in 360 ayes, 295 nays, in favor of cutting of the debate on admitting Tammany delegation. Colorado voted four ayes and two nays. So the main question was ordered.

Mr. Young said under the rules of the house there was an hour's debate, of which he proposed two-thirds be given to the contestants and their friends [Applause.]

Loud cries of platform, take the platform, caused Mr. Young to go to the stand, and he proposed to give forty minutes to any man who would be supported by Mr. Kelly of New York, reserving his own twenty minutes reply. [Applause and hisses.]

The chair stated that he understood it to be the wish of the contestants to be represented by Mr. Kelly, and he asked that he be accorded that privilege. [Hisses and cries of "yes."] Finding the chair announced that he heard no objection, and invited Mr. Kelly to the platform. Kelly not being in the hall, the sergeant at arms was instructed to escort any body to the platform whom the New York contestants should indicate. In response Gen. Miller, of Albany, came forward, and was greeted with applause.

He hoped the right of free speech would not be interrupted for a moment by any man in whose veins flowed a drop of democratic blood. [Cheers.] The sentiment came here with the same earnest desire as animated the delegates in this hall [Applause.] They came with no fire-brand, but to present an olive-branch with a view to victorious success. Reference to the name of Kelly was greeted with applause and hisses, and was answered when the speaker declared that he had no superior in integrity and devotion to democratic principles and party.

He proceeded to argue the importance of giving the Tammany men the same representation in this body as a means of securing unity and success. Only fifteen of the contestants are from New York city and the remainder of them represented over 40,000 democrats scattered all over the state and numbering at least one fifth of the democratic vote in said state. Speaking for the contestants from the rural districts, he said they intended to support whoever should be made the candidate of this convention. They were all anxious only for such proceedings here, as shall lead best to promote and insure a great victory. If the convention would observe the democratic precedent and give the contestants here an opportunity to participate in its proceeding, he could assure them that the democrats would carry the state of New York. [Applause.]

He proceeded to urge that the sitting delegates here were the representatives of machine politics against which public sentiment was protesting in the democratic as well as the republican party. Unless some compromise of this question should be made here, it would be impossible to prevent the running of two democratic electoral tickets in New York and this would tend to defeat. He and his friends control this result and by so they might, unless this convention should give them the twenty-six recommended by the minority report, the party would be defeated in New York. Give them these and they would draw out and make effective the magnificent democratic vote of New York, which would insure a victory next fall.

Amos J. Parker, announced by the chairman as a sterling old democrat, followed for the contestants. He came in a spirit of harmony with a great desire that the wisdom and patriotism of the convention should unite the party and redeem the national government He and his associates from the rural districts should support whatever tickets should be named here. [Applause.] He voted for Governor Robinson. [Applause.] The contestants represent much more than the 40,000 Tammany vote in New York city or the 70,000 votes cast for Kelly for governor. There was no time here in detail to discuss the merits of this contest, but he appealed to the proceedings of the democratic convention and urged that of 1856 be followed now in the spirit. Then half of the vote of New York was given to the contestants. They ask now only two of the seven votes. If the convention desired them to join in the work of redeeming the country with any hope of success, he implored it to give the contestants a chance to do so.

Mr. Hubbard of Texas sustained the minority report. He was not here representing any faction, but only a great state which the census would show had two millions of people He and the delegates all came here prepared to vote for S. J. Tilden, [great applause], or any other of the names to be presented whom the party represented here should choose as standard bearers He rejoiced that the south was solid for the democratic party, [applause], but he presented himself as the advocate of compromise working to success. He did not question the regularity of the New York sitting members. They are so regular that they bend backward, [laughter], but they might by stubbornness find their butcher in New York. [Applause.] They must not ignore the necessities of the situation in New York, New Jersey and elsewhere. [Applause.] They must be wise and not technical merely, if they hoped to win The mere regularity in question was not the question, but what is wise and best calculated to advance the democratic party and its principles. They wanted votes, and must avail themselves of the means calculated to obtain them. The issue is one broader than New York; the destiny of this country, genuine reform, the liberties of the states, are involved in this small issue now before the body. If New Yorkers here could not unite among themselves, then he called upon the convention to put up their hands and join them in wedlock and swear to union for the common cause. Let the democracy set its boot upon the seed of discord wherever it may be sown. Massachusetts had settled its own grievances by a compromise. If New York can't do that, let us do it for them. If we allow discord to be thrown in our laps, if you allow to be kicked like a foot ball the men whose votes you will need by and by, we will have thrown away our birthright. We can look for success only by the exercise of a broad and catholic spirit, embracing such a question as this. The speaker's manner was very impassioned throughout, and made apparently a deep impression. In conclusion he said, if we fail now, the sun in heaven may never rise again on a successful democratic party." At the conclusion Hubbard was warmly congratulated by many delegates on the platform.

John R. Fellows of New York next spoke for the majority report The question was as to whether the sovereign majesty of New York is great enough to create for itself representation in the national convention, or whether that regal right shall be wrested from her to be exercised by sister states. He proceeded with an argument alive with statement to show there was no parallel between the present situation and the precedent of 1856, to which reference had been made. The bolt at Syracuse was up on a candidate and nothing else. The division of 1856 was upon a clear question of principle and conviction The Tammany men at Syracuse bolted the nomination and went out and nominated Jno. Kelley and defeated the democratic party. They now come here and insult you by asking recognition at your hands. John Kelley had declared before the credential committee last night with all the force of language at his command, that if you shall dare to nominate a certain man he and his friends would bolt again. [Cries of them him out and confusion.] Again in front of a hotel he said again, that if you nominate Samuel J. Tilden, he and his friends will run a separate electoral ticket. [A voice in the gallery, to they will, laughter and applause.] So the galleries speak more plainly than the men upon this platform, but not out of the mouths of babes and fools shall we arrive at correct conclusions [A voice, you supported Tweed, cries of put him out.] In conclusion I ask, dare you deny to the sovereign state of New York the right you so proudly and justly demanded for yourself (cheers); dare you violate her person and trample her sovereignty in the dust for the whole question is whether you will give the state of New York the right to decide her own representation or take that decision as picked up on the streets of Cincinnati given by delegates for sister states He appealed to South Carolina and other southern delegations as advocates of states' rights to stand by the principle involved. The individual delegates coming here from New York were of secondary importance, but beware how you spit in the face of the queen of the south [Applause.]

Rufus Peckham of Albany followed in favor of the majority report. It was votes that the party wanted and must have. How were they to be procured? In 1876, after the St. Louis convention had nominated Tilden for president [cheers] Lucius Robinson was nominated and elected governor of New York. In the honest discharge of his official duty as governor he removed the county clerk of New York. This led to a declaration of war by Tammany against Robinson. The democrats of the rural districts determined to stand by Robinson and renominated him, whereupon Kelley and Tammany Hall nominated another candidate, stabbed Robinson to the heart and elected Cornell and now with hands still bloody, they come here to ask you in the interest of harmony to disfranchise the regular delegates who are sitting here. Grant their demand and the gentleman from Texas will be howling louder in the wilderness for votes than he is now. The democrats of New York would never submit to such treatment. Votes not to be had in any such way. [Applause.]

Mr. Young, of Georgia, as chairman of the committee on credentials, closed the debate with a three minute speech. The committee had found only one regular delegation here from New York and they had recommended their admission. Tilden was not before this convention. [Applause.] For one he wished to God he were. [Applause.] The question was simply as to who the rightful representatives of New York were. The chair stated the question was first upon the substitution of the minority report and ordered a roll call of states which resulted as follows:

	Yeas.	Nays.
Alabama	11
Arkansas	12
California	2	10
Colorado	3	3

New York was called but excused from voting. The chair announced the result, ayes 205½, nays 457. So the motion to substitute the minority report was rejected. The question remaining on the adoption of the majority report was adopted by viva voce vote. [Great applause.]

Mr. Wilson of West Virginia offered a resolution that the delegation for the state of New York, of which Amos J. Parker is chairman, be invited to seats in the convention during its session.

Mr. Young favored it and it was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Martin of Illinois the report and resolutions from the committee on permanent organization was then adopted. The chair appointed as a committee to conduct the permanent president to the chair, Senators McDonald of Indiana, Butler of South Carolina and Thos. O'Connor of Connecticut. Mr. Stevenson not being present, the band entertained the audience while the committee went after him.

It was 1:45 when Stevenson arrived and was presented to the convention as the president. Mr. Hoadley in handing him the gavel as a symbol of authority said it could fall in no worthier hands He was received with applause, He said he accepted the chair with a high appreciation of the honor and responsibility of the cause confided to him. He knew that he was not indebted for the compliment to any personal merit, but it was a tribute to his old grand commonwealth and its devotion in sunshine and storm to democratic principles. In the name of Kentucky therefore he presented his thanks. He welcomed the representative men of the democratic party. He continued at some length to extol the democratic party. As his face was turned away from the reporters little of it could be heard.

On motion a resolution of thanks were tendered to the temporary chairman for the able and impartial discharge of his duties, which Judge Hoadley briefly acknowledged.

Mr. Breckenridge of Kentucky moved as the committee on resolutions were not ready to report, that the convention proceed to the business of nominating.

Mr. Bangham, of Maryland, moved a recess [Loud cries of "no" "no."] It was voted down by a great majority.

Mr. Breckenridge modified his motion so as to provide for a call of the roll of states for the presentation of candidates and that each delegate may have ten minutes in which to present his candidate.

An Ohio delegate moved to postpone further consideration of Breckenridge's motion until the committee on platform shall have reported. [Loud cries of "no" "no".] After considerable confusion in which various counter motions were made, the purport of which could not be heard, the motion to proceed to the naming of candidates as moved by Mr. Breckenridge was adopted.

A roll of states was called for nominations When California was called McElrath, of that delegation, took the platform saying it was the high privilege of this convention to name the next president of the United States [Applause.] After some general remarks as to the purpose and policy of the democratic party, he said he desired to present the name of her own son, born in New England and developed in California, Stephen J. Field. Appointed as a democrat during the progress of the civil war he held the commission of Abraham Lincoln as evidence of his loyalty to the Union. If nominated here he would sweep California like the winds which swept through her golden gate. [Applause.] He was a man without fear and without reproach, the very embodiment of democratic faith.

General Browne of Colorado seconded the nomination of Field, but could not be heard and was interrupted by cries of "Time."

The secretary read the roll until he reached the call of Delaware, which was greeted with loud applause. George Grey, of that state, presented the name of Thomas F. Bayard. Delaware was small in numbers, but was proud of her history, her position in the sisterhood of states. She was here to-day to do her best in behalf of the common cause. Who will lead best in the struggles for constitutional government and popular rights, they were to-day to decide. [Voices "Bayard, Bayard."] When the speaker mentioned the full name of Thos. F. Bayard it was hailed with a spontaneous burst of applause. He was no novice, but a man of experience and statesmanship His name and record were known, wherever our flag floats or the English tongue is spoken. With private character spotless as the snow, judgment clear as the sunlight and keen as the flashing sabre, honest, the people all know him and need not be told who and what he is. In whom more than him will the business interests the of country trust? Who better than he will truly represent the democratic power or give higher doctrine to its aspirations than he? Whose name is a very synonym of opposition to corruption in every form? Who has contributed more to the present commanding strength of the democratic party? Don't tell us you admire and honor him; that he is invaluable. Tell us that he is not too good a man to command the suffrages of the democratic party. Tell us that a brave party is to be led by a brave man, who will never falter in any emergency. His nomination will be an omen of victory from the gulf to the ocean.

When Illinois was called Samuel S. Marshal, after a somewhat tiresome political speech in which he was interrupted by impatient calls of "time" and confusion. He said the American people wanted as a leader a man worthy of the cause, a legislator in behalf of the unanimous voice of Illinois the gallant soldier Wm. R. Morrison of Illinois.

A Virginia delegate protested against the outside interference and said if they were repeated he would demand that the hall and galleries be cleared of all except delegates.

The call for Indiana was a signal for the most enthusiastic cheering outside the delegates seats. It was renewed as wildly as ever as the banner of Thos. A. Hendricks was waved from the rear of the platform.

Senator Voorhis, of Indiana, desired to name a distinguished citizen of Indiana, who was fit to be president. Indiana had for twenty years been an important battle ground of the democratic party, and it had never faltered under Hendricks in the front. [Applause.] There were no dividing counsels in Indiana, there was no treachery. They were unanimous and cordial in their presentation of the gentleman whom he had known. He was worthy of all support and his administration, if nominated and elected would be pure.

When Massachusetts was called Leverett Saltonstall took the platform to second the nomination of Bayard. [Applause.] He made an eloquent appeal in behalf of Bayard.

New York being called a voice in the galleries called "Tilden!" "Tilden!" and was greeted with furious hisses.

When Ohio was called Mr. Sweeney of that state took the platform and read a speech in which he said the democracy of Ohio in their state convention with absolute unanimity had determined to present the name of A. G. Thurman. After an eloquent eulogy on Thurman he denied that Ohio was a republican state, [applause] and argued that Garfield's nomination was an admission by the Chicago convention that Ohio was not republican. The speaker continued at considerable length with great rapidity and much humor and was honored at his close with a hearty round of applause, and as he returned to his seat the Ohio delegation rose to receive him with cheers.

When Pennsylvania was called its chairman said they had no candidate to present, but one of their delegates desired to present a name, Dan Dougherty, of Philadelphia, then took the platform as he said to nominate one whose name would reconcile all factions and carry Pennsylvania, Indiana, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York [applause] and Ohio. He proposed the name of the soldier whose name was stainless as his sword, Winfield S. Hancock.

This was the occasion for the wildest burst of applause that had been witnessed, either on the floor or in the galleries, many delegates rising to their feet.

When South Carolina was called Wade Hampton rose and was greeted with a tremendous burst of applause He went forward on crutches and ascended the platform. When order was restored Hampton made a powerful speech. He ended by seconding the nomination of Bayard.

Mr. Hubbard, of Texas, seconded the nomination of Hancock.

Mr. Strongfellow, of Virginia, seconded the nomination of Judge Field.

Mr. Daniels of Virginia followed by seconding the nomination of Hancock.

Mr. Goode of Virginia then seconded the nomination of Senator Thurman.

After the nominations had been made, a motion was made to adjourn until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock. This was defeated by a vote of 317½ to 395½. New York, Ohio, Indiana and Colorado voted solidly for adjournment. The convention then proceeded to ballot with the following result:

California, Field 6, Thurman 3, Hendricks 1, Seymour 2.

Colorado, Field 1, W. A. H. Loveland 5. [Cries of "Who, who," and laughter.]

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,

JAMES A. GARFIELD.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

Jewett is an awful dark horse.

The Denver Republican is now Dr. Greenleaf's organ.

One thing is certain about the Cincinnati convention. Its nomination will not surprise anyone.

General Garfield will support any law which will secure the equal coinage and circulation of gold and silver.

Mayor Humphreys could not have voted on the first ballot at Cincinnati, as there is not even one vote recorded for Humphreys. This is indisputable proof.

Mayor Humphreys would be a better president of the United States than mayor of Leadville in one respect. He could attend the political conventions and horse races without going outside of his realm.

The cartoon in the Graphic representing the futile effort of an editor to find anything crooked about Garfield in the Congressional Record is said to describe a Colorado journalist seeking for weak points in Garfield's silver record.

The Summit County Times, speaking of a complimentary notice in the GAZETTE in regard to the mention of Senator Webster's name for congress, says: "The GAZETTE in the above paragraph mentions one of the most progressive, able and dignified gentlemen of Summit county. He is not an arrogant, presumptuous person but is a gentleman of real worth, who has done much in the legislative halls of Colorado for his constituents. Should the hosts of the republicans select Senator Webster as their standard bearer for the congressional district, the honor could not fall in worthier hands."

General Garfield has felt extremely sensitive for fear he should be charged with disloyalty to Sherman in the Chicago convention. Directly after his nomination he said to a correspondent of the Cleveland Herald: "I wish you would say that the [illegible] [illegible]. I wish you would say that I have done everything and omitted nothing to secure Secretary Sherman's nomination. I want it plainly understood that I have not sought this nomination and have protested against the use of my name. If Senator Hoar had permitted, I would have forbidden anybody to vote for me. But he took me off my feet before I had said what I intended. I am very sorry that it has occurred, but if my position is fully explained, a nomination coming unsought and unexpected like this, will be the crowning gratification of my life."

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE characterizes the News' quotations which it can not answer as forgeries. The Colorado Springs GAZETTE by personal experience is an adept in all the practices of the liar and the thief.—[Denver News.

The above proves one of two things. Either that the News has no sense of honor, and hence is indifferent to a charge of forgery, or else that the News did forge the quotations and could only answer the solemn charge of having forged quotations from General Garfield's speeches with flippant blackguardism. We have a right to come to this conclusion because the burden of proof rested with the News. We denied the genuineness of a quotation from one of Garfield's speeches. We could not prove that it was a forgery by giving the page of the Congressional Record because the Record does not contain what Mr. Garfield did not say, and what any dishonest scribbler might impute to him. The News however could have easily shown that it did not forge the quotation by giving the page of the Congressional Record on which it might be found. Hence we have a right to draw the conclusion that either the News has no sense of honor or else that it did forge. Either conclusion places the News outside the pale of respectability. They show that the paper has neither honor, honesty or decency. This is strong language but there is occasion for it. We are simply using plain English to describe its course. That it should dare to resort to such practices is an offence against the journals and journalists of Colorado.

THE DEGOLYER CHARGES.

The Denver Tribune of yesterday republished the following letter regarding Mr. Garfield's connection with the De Golyer contracts, written by Hon. J. M. Wilson who conducted the congressional investigation:

CONNERSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 1, 1874.

The Hon. George W. Steele:

Dear Sir: To the request for information as to whether or not the action of General Garfield, in connection with the affairs of the District of Columbia, was the subject of condemnation by the committee that recently had those affairs under consideration, I answer that it was not; nor was there, in my opinion, any evidence that would have warranted any unfavorable criticism upon his conduct. The facts disclosed by the evidence, so far as he is concerned, are briefly these: The board of public works was considering the question as to the kind of pavements that should be laid. There was a contest as to the respective merits of various wooden pavements. Mr. Parsons represented, as attorney, the De Golyer & McClelland patent, and, being called away from Washington about the time the hearing was to be had before the board of public works on this subject, procured General Garfield to appear before the board in his stead, and argue the merits of this patent. This he did, and this was the whole of his connection in the matter. It was not a question as the kind of contract that should be made, but as to whether this particular kind of pavement should be laid. The criticism of the committee was not upon the pavement in favor of which General Garfield argued, but was upon the contract made with reference to it; and there was no evidence which would warrant the conclusion that he had anything to do with the latter.

Very respectfully, etc., J. M. WILSON.

Some papers have taken the position that it is foolish to refute these charges, because it intimates that Garfield's record is shaky. But we think otherwise. These charges are baseless and it only requires explanation to show it. Not to make the full explanation will leave confusion in the minds of some as to the purity of Garfield's character. The above letter of Mr. Wilson clearly states the De Golyer matter and is sufficient vindication of Garfield. Only the truth simply stated is necessary.

There has been much said about Mr. Arthur's dishonesty in the administration of the affairs of the New York custom house. We have steadily maintained that he was removed from office by President Hayes simply because he did not sympathize with the civil service reform methods of the present administration. We have never heard anything against his personal character. While we do not sympathize with Mr. Arthur's view of the civil service, we think he is personally worthy of the honor that has been bestowed upon him. We trust he will receive enlightenment, from his association with Garfield, on the subject. Mr. Dorman B. Eaton, who has written largely on the subject of civil service, thoroughly sympathizes with President Hayes' efforts to reform it, and was appointed president of the civil service commission under Grant, has given the following opinion of Arthur: "He is a man amply qualified to discharge with dignity and honor the duties of the office for which he is nominated. He is a well balanced man. He has a patriotic spirit. He has maintained an unblemished private life. He has had a large experience in public affairs, and can be trusted to do well anything that will ever be put upon him. Therefore, you may, without qualification, indorse him as a man worthy to fill the second highest place in the nation."

Garfield's Relations.

General Garfield's mother, a plain, companionable old lady, is living at her son's house in Washington. She is a devout Campbellite and so is her daughter-in-law. There is a Campbellite church on Vermont avenue, Washington, and both the mother and wife of the nominee attend regularly.

Abraham Garfield, the great uncle of the general, and John Hoar, grandfather of G. F. Hoar, were among the militia witnesses who deposed to the British assault at Concord Bridge. Their depositions were taken at the desire of the Continental congress, which wished to show that it was the British government which made the first illegal aggressions.

Congressional Candidates.

The names mentioned for the Congressional nomination on the republican side are James B. Belford, of Central; C. T. Thomson, of Leadville; E. K. Stimson, of Arapahoe; Amos Steck, of Arapahoe; George Chilcott, of Pueblo; Judge J. M. North, of Boulder, and J. P. Maxwell, of Boulder. Out of this list it will not be hard to select a good man.—[Denver Tribune.

Mayor Humphreys' Possibility.

If Mayor Humphreys should after all be nominated at Cincinnati—ah! then would his enemies tremble! The Chronicle wants to hedge in time, and desires to state that it has always been in favor of his honor.—[Leadville Chronicle.

THE DEAD CZARINA.

The ... Princess Who Became the Empress of Russia.

For generations past the Romanoffs have so uniformly chosen their brides from Germany that the Grand Duke Michael might well retort his brother's proposal to expel the Germans by saying, "Shall we begin with our own wives, then?" But not one among them has been more deservedly popular than her whose death Russia is now lamenting. When the Princess of Hesse Darmstadt, the daughter of the Grand Duke Ludwig II., espoused in April, 1841, the future ruler of an empire in whose smallest province her father's little grand duchy would have been utterly lost, it might have been thought that this startling elevation would have made her haughty and ambitious, eager to intermeddle in politics, and to impress her own individuality upon her adopted country. But such was not the case. A czarevna at 17, czarina at 31, she retained amid all the splendors of St. Petersburg the same kindly, simple nature as among the red brick houses and prim tea gardens of her own quaint capital. But although keeping aloof from politics, she was always ready to relieve distress or to promote social progress. In the question of female education and employment, as also in the establishment of village schools and public kitchens, she interested herself warmly. In 1867 she gave largely to the poor of Paris, and persuaded her imperial husband to do the same. In 1868 she exerted herself most zealously to relieve misery occasioned in Central Russia by several fires, and the partial failure of the crops; while, during the terrible winter in 1869, when the thermometer fell to seventy-one degress below freezing, she provided a number of St. Petersburg izvoshtchiks (hackmen) with warm clothing, receiving from the poor half frozen wretches a blessing as fervent as any sovereign ever earned.

But when any great occasion demanded it no one could play the Czarina better than Marie of Hesse Darmstadt. Her reception of the Circassian hero Schamyl, when brought as a prisoner to St. Petersburg, was so graceful in its mingling of kindness and dignity that the old warrior had reason to remark in his grand, courtly way, as he kissed her hand: "Had I known against whom I was fighting it would have palsied my arm." Nor can any one who saw it easily forget her appearance at Peterhof on the 27th of September, 1866, to meet the arrival of Princess Dagmar as her son's bride. The imperial carriage, beside which rode the czar and czarevitch, in the uniform of the imperial guard, was the mark of all eyes, and despite the ravages of sickness and sorrow, the czarina's handsome oval face, with its long, dark hair, clear-cut profile, and large, tender, lustrous eyes, completely eclipsed the girlish prettiness of the bride and the somewhat expressionless features of her own daughter, the future duchess of Edinburgh. But the fatal blight was already upon her. Her health, always delicate, failed so rapidly under the shock of her eldest son's death in 1865, and of the subsequent attempts upon her husband's life, that from 1879 onward the end was again and again anticipated long before it came. She was in the winter palace at the time of the terrible explosion some months ago, and that additional shock hastened her death. The affection of the common people for her, despite the fact of her belonging to the hated "Nyemtzi," (Germans) was, perhaps, the highest compliment that she could have received. On one occasion, a burly peasant, who had just saluted her in passing, was heard to mutter: "Who'd ever have thought such a good woman could have come out of Germany? but, perhaps, it's her living so long in Russia that's done it!"

At the time of her marriage, the czarina became a convert to the Greek church, and throughout her life she was a religious zealot. She was the mother of seven children, the Grand Dukes Nicholas, Alexander, Vladimir, Alexis, Sergius and Paul, and the Grand Duchess Marie, wife of the Duke of Edinburgh. [New York Times.

Meissonnier's Houses.

Meissonnier, when in Paris, lives near the Parc Monceau. It would be more than even his reputation is worth to live anywhere else. All the great artists settle there; the sign of their progress in their profession is to build a palace in this quarter. The frontage of Meissonnier is at the top of the Boulevard Melesherbes, just at the beginning of the Avenue de Villiers. Dumas and Sarah Bernhardt are his neighbors, for all the artistic talents house in the same region. Each artist naturally builds in his own favorite style, and we have some wonderful structures to relieve the monotony of the Paradise of M. Haussmann. One has derived his inspiration from Moorish Spain, another from Switzerland or Italy. Meissonnier's house is Italian Renaissance. There is little to see outside, beyond a large expanse of masonry, as neatly joined as a piece of cabinet work; but within you have the terraces and the arcades which form such charming backgrounds in the pictures of the Italian school. It is the Italian Renaissance adapted, of course, to modern French needs.

The owner has chosen a style which admits but sparingly of ornament, and which depends chiefly for its effect on the purity of unbroken line. But where the ornament comes in he has taken care to have it of the best. He has been his own designer. For the years during which the house has been in progress he has worked as an architect as well as a painter. Not a bit of the decoration in galleries, staircases and rooms but has been done from his own designs. It is a fact but since men can not live without a weakness, we may congratulate him on his choice. He has kept rigorously to the laws of his design. You pass from the courtyard to the studio, through a pillared hall, and up a staircase rich in carved panelling, for in the interior the style admits of somewhat greater exuberance. Then you come to the prime wonder of the house its immense studio. There are two ateliers; but the larger one, for some reason best known to the painter, serves as a kind of ante chamber to the smaller. The latter is a retreat to which Meissonnier, who is one of the shyest of men, escapes from the world. It is difficult to give an idea of the amplitude of the great one without going into measurements; but certainly it would hold the deliberative assembly of a small state. Here again a rich panelling runs around the walls, and the place looks too fine for daily work. Meissonnier is understood to be reserving it for his large picture; for he means to paint a large picture of which something will be said by and by. Perhaps this much talked of project is a mere blind to relieve him of the importunities of friends who estimate canvasses by the size of their frames. Considering the scale on which he usually paints, one of the cupboards of this apartment might serve him for a workroom. From the smaller studio we may pass out into the open air by a gallery which forms the roof of the arcade, and make the round of the premises to the coach-houses and stables, all in perfect keeping of style. Even the hack-stairs are, in their way, exquisite specimens of Early Italian work.

And this is but one of Meissonnier's homes. He has another at Poissy, a rural market whence Paris was fed in the old days. Here he lives in the summer time with his son, who is now out of the world of art, for his neighbor. There are two studios at Poissy, one at the top of the house, the other adjoining the stables, for use in inclement weather. At Poissy, Meissonnier, is something more than an artist—a municipal ruler, and he is believed to aspire to the high office of Mayor. He missed it on one occasion by an unfortunate dispute with his colleagues. Whatever he may have been at one period of his life, he is now understood to be a very good republican. But there are men living who believe they have seen him in the cocked hat and green embroidery of some office of honor under the empire. They may be mistaken. He made quite a gallant stand against the authors of the "16th of May," when their restrictions on the freedom of the press threatened to deprive him of his daily paper. The salon at Poissy has those quaint little square windows which so often figure in the backgrounds of his pictures. He built the country-house as he built the house in town, and he fitted it up with artistic luxuriance, designing most of the furniture himself, notably the silver service of the table. Each place has cost him something in millions. The bill for the house in Paris has been augmented by his resolution to have all the work of the very best. He takes a peculiar pride in the thoroughness of the mechanical part of it. The stones are beautifully fitted and joined, and the building has scarcely settled an inch since the foundations were laid. This is a costly picture, or, say an ingenious device for getting rid of superfluities of fortune. Without Poissy and Paris poor Meissonnier might be troubled by too rapidly accumulating millions. It is estimated that he has at least two millions in the shape of unfinished commissions in his studio at the present time. [London Truth.

Ale and stout cost more to produce, and always command much higher prices; but, as we wish the public to judge for themselves, is the reason for the great reduction. Once used, always used. Mr. H. S. Clement has resumed his old place on the police force.

Several cars of iron rails for the Colorado Springs and Manitou railroad arrived in the city yesterday.

Castello's Circus passed through the city at 3:15 Tuesday night, on their way to Denver, where they appeared yesterday.

We have received the first number of the Elk Mountain Pilot, published at Irwin, Gunnison county, Colorado. It is handsomely printed and filled with interesting mining news.

The Plunkett constellation played East Lynn last evening to a fair audience. This evening they will play Fate, when Carrie Plunkett will appear as Florence Grantley, the injured wife.

The Congregational sociable will take place at the church this evening. Refreshments will be served including strawberries and iced cream after 6 o'clock, p. m. An admission fee of 10 cents will be charged at the door.

Mr. Abbey, of the firm of Mook & Abbey, proprietors of the North End market, arrive in town yesterday in charge of a car-load of fine fat Kansas corn-fed steers. The North End market is establishing a fine reputation for supplying the best of everything in its line.

The Pullman palace sleeping cars for the Denver and Rio Grande road have arrived and were run over the line on the Leadville express last night for the first time. They will be run through to Granite, 20 miles from Leadville, which is the present terminus of the extension.

The Emporia (Kas.) Journal for June 19, contains a seven column article descriptive of the Holly water works just completed in Emporia by Messrs. Russell & Alexander. As usual nothing but words of praise are spoken of these contractors, whose friends in this city will rejoice at their success.

A match race for $20 a side was run at Terry's track yesterday afternoon between Nat West's s. s. Never Mind and Fred Weiss' d. g. Jake. The distance run was 1-4 mile in which distance Never Mind was given 40 feet sweepstakes. The race was a closely contested one and resulted in favor of Nat West's stallion by a lead of only three feet.

At the sociable given this evening in the Congregational church by the ladies of the society, Miss Josie Settle, of San Jose, California, a graduate of the National School of Oratory and Elocution, Philadelphia, will read some selections. Miss Settle comes highly recommended and her reading will be an additional attraction to the sociable.

Mr. Douglas Ely, informs us that it will require several hours this morning to fill the reservoir. He urgently requests the citizens not to use more water than is actually necessary when it is turned on as the supply in the reservoir will be all the water at command for a day or two. The pipes at Manitou will be cut to-morrow in order to attach the new fire plugs and some predict that the sudden pressure of water when let in may result in a break. For this reason all are requested to use it sparingly.

The city council have ordered the extension of water mains as follows: From Dale street to Yumpa, between Weber and Corona streets. The Pike's Peak main will be extended [illegible] bridge crossing Shook's run. Both mains running north and south through the city will be extended two blocks south of Morino street. The Cimarron street pipe will be run to Sierra Madre street. The extensions above described will exhaust the entire supply of pipe on hand.

STRIKING PAY MINERAL.

Lively Prospecting and Cheerful Prospects in Ruby Camp.

Through the kindness of Colonel Ensign, of this city, we are enabled to lay before our readers this morning some interesting extracts from a letter addressed to him by his partner, Mr. J. W. Hurst, who has charge of the property of the Elk Mountain Mining Co., in Ruby Camp:

"RUBY CAMP, June 4, 1880. The snow is melting fast, and the bare ground shows in many places. A great deal of prospecting is being done, and so many staking claims that it will be necessary for me to stay here until our assessment work is completed. The snow and water are so troublesome that the prosecution of work is difficult and expensive.

"On the Ohio Creek road, over the divide between Gunnison and Ruby, there is snow to a depth of six feet for a space of six miles. This point has to be passed over at three o'clock in the morning, or thereabouts, and freights are from three to seven cents per pound for the short distance named. Two saw mills will go over soon. Lumber is twenty cents per foot in Ruby. Many log houses have been erected, and from fifty to one hundred more are in process of construction. The Crested Butte road to this place, via Coal Creek, will be completed in eight days.

"Large bodies of ruby silver have been found in Irwin, (Ruby postoffice), causing much excitement. I am convinced that some of these finds are not in place, so do not believe all you hear concerning rich discoveries. I think I told you in my last that we had worked the coal claim and built a house on the property. It is a good layout and no mistake. * * *

"June 14. All is well. We have struck ruby in the Alice. This lode and the Wm. M. Curtis are undoubtedly extensions of the Forest Queen. The assesment work last year was done on the last croppings. We are now working on the main lode twenty or thirty feet west of the discovery shaft; have twelve inches of solid quartz and mineral through all connecting rock. Please say to parties interested that this property is not for sale.

"The mountains seem full of water, but prospecting and locating of claims go on notwithstanding. Hundreds are entering the reservation and rich finds are reported. In the Ruby district mineral has been found within one and a half miles of Crested Butte. Several openings have been made south of Copley's east mines, and east of the "Mosquito" and "Lucy." Many leads have been located south of Coal Creek on the range some two miles north of Ohio Creek. During the next six weeks there will be within a radius of six miles from this place as many locations made as were made here during the whole of last season. The future of this district can not yet be comprehended. The mills have contracted one-half million feet of lumber at $35 per thousand feet, and one-third of this has again been bargained for at $65 per thousand. Crested Butte and Gothic are building fast. Gunnison is not so lively of late."

* * * *

"We have to eat very lean beef here. George Hurst went out one day last week to kill a deer. He came on to a grizzly and her three cubs. The old one raised on her hind feet to look and George shot her through the shoulders and broke her down. He then went within ten feet and shot her through the head. She tried to get to him but failed. After this came the fun. George gave chase to the cubs, caught one and it bit him so badly he put his foot in it, and shot one of the others, the third one making good its escape. The killed and captured animals were taken to camp, so we have plenty of dead bear to eat, and a live one for amusement. The cub has a very impartial disposition and has given each of us at least one bite. He is about six weeks old."

Obituary—John J. Haas.

John J. Haas was born in Hunterdon county, New Jersey, February 24th, 1815; died in Colorado Springs, Colorado, June 10th, 1880.

He was married August 27th, 1836, to Miss Hannah C. Hand, of New Jersey, who died October 14th, 1856, leaving three sons and two daughters who are still living in the eastern states. He was married again December 2d, 1857, to Mrs. Lucinda Fate who with their only child, Miss Laura May Haas, survives him. Mr. Haas came to Colorado several years ago to obtain relief from asthma from which he had suffered from infancy. Since making his home in Colorado he experienced much relief and many times perfect freedom from this difficulty. His death caused by heart disease was sudden, leaving no parting words for his friends. Yet for many years he had been a professed christian and died in the faith in which he had so long lived.

Suitable funeral services were held at the family residence on South Tejon street, and the body was interred in the city cemetery. The bereaved family have the sympathy of many friends residing in Colorado Springs. W. L. S.

At the meeting of Hose Company No. 1 held in the hose house last evening, Mr. A. N. Wheeler was elected secretary of the company.

The ladies of the Baptist Church will hold a sociable at the residence of Mr. L. K. Oldroyd, east Pike's Peak avenue this evening. All are cordially invited.

Found After Six Months.

Our readers will remember that our correspondent "E. C." in Ruby Camp has given in his letters an account of the loss of a mail carrier by the name of Peter Johnson. On December 5, 1879, the above Peter Johnson started out from Crested Butte in a blinding snow storm, accompanied by Geo. B. Spahr, who was then carrying the mail. They traveled together until they got through the "swamp," over half way to Irwin, notwithstanding it was very cold and traveling very difficult. Arriving where the trail forked, one coming up round Coal creek. Mr. Johnson concluded he would come the short way, while Mr. Spahr started the other way, at the same time telling Johnson if he got in first to send some one out after him as he did not think he would be able to get in, being then nearly exhausted. After being out two days and one night Mr. Spahr was picked up in the park just below camp, in an insensible condition, by Dick Irwin, who happened to be coming in from King's ranch.

The sequel to this story may be found in the Elk Mountain Pilot of June 17th, which gives an account of the finding of Johnson's body as follows: "On the morning of June 9th, three prospectors, Messrs. Jos. P. Murphy and N. and J. Johnson, while sitting on a log, resting their limbs, at this end of Grant park, about a mile and a half northeast of here, discovered the dead body of a man. Their attention was attracted to the spot where the body was by the peculiar action of their dog, the animal whining and circling around the body.

"The body was lying in a straight position, on its back, with one hand on the breast and the other on the abdomen. The hands were incased in buckskin gloves, while the lower limbs were covered with long rubber boots. The face and upper part of the chest had been eaten away by wild animals, and it was impossible to recognize the corpse. The snow had melted away from the body and putrefaction had set in.

"The gentlemen above mentioned came to the city and informed the coroner of the facts above cited, when a jury was formed and taken to the body.

"Upon examination the body proved to be that of Peter Johnson, a Norwegian, who perished in the snow on the 5th of last December, while on his way from Crested Butte to Irwin, a distance of eight miles."

Personal.

Miss McPherson returned to her home in Virginia yesterday.

Sheriff Smith went north on official business yesterday afternoon.

Messrs. E. C. Betts and Clark Bissell, of Pueblo, were in the city yesterday.

Mrs. C. M. Hobbs was among the departures for the east on the morning train yesterday.

Gen. C. W. Babcock, a prominent business man of Lawrence, Kansas is registered at the Springs.

Messrs. J. R. Holt and W. H. Fishback, well-known attorneys at the Leadville bar, are registered at the Springs hotel.

Mrs. B. O. Austin went east via the Santa Fe yesterday morning. She will spend the summer at Carrolton, Missouri.

Mr. D. Porter and family, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, have rooms at the National. They will spend the summer in Colorado Springs.

Dr. W. C. Gibbons, the well-known temperance lecturer, passed through town yesterday. He will spend the summer in camping and has a most complete outfit for that purpose.

"Moss Agate" the clever mining correspondent of the Denver Tribune made us a pleasant call yesterday. He will remain a few days in town and will write up Colorado Springs and Manitou for his journal.

We are glad to notice that Messrs. Ensign, Hurst and Payton have struck good mineral in the Alice and William Curtis mines. Our readers will find the particulars in a letter from Mr. Hurst which appears in another column.

The Hon. D. R. Murray of the well-known law firm of Bennett & Murray, of Leadville, is among the arrivals at the Springs hotel. He has recently returned from Kentucky where he has been in attendance at the state legislature.

Mr. C. E. Perkins, vice president and general manager of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, and Messrs. Lyman Cook, J. C. Peasley, J. W. Blythe, Prof. A. W. Gordon and Col. Higbee, of the board of directors, came down from Denver yesterday. They will remain at the Beebee House, Manitou, until this morning, when they leave for the south.

The U. S. Coast and Geodetic surveying party which disbanded in this city last December, was organized again yesterday and will begin active work at once. The party is in charge of Lieutenant O. H. Tittmann, with Messrs. J. E. McGrath and George F. Bird, as assistants and a full and complete corpse of men. They will resume work where they discontinued last fall and the first camp will be pitched in the vicinity of Mr. Russell Gates' ranch, on Horse creek. From this point they will work east towards the Kansas line and occupy stations established by a reconnoisance party in 1878.

I beg leave to anounce to the citizens of Colorado Springs and El Paso county, that I have purchased the dental practice of Dr. L. H. Sutherland, and am now prepared to give my personal attention to all operations connected with dentistry. After many years of active practice in the city of Philadelphia, and serving as Demonstrator in the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery, of that city, I feel fully competent, as well as deeply interested in my profession, and will take great pleasure in rendering my best services to the people of this community.
